Will Ivory Coast's education system be rebuilt?

Literacy levels hover around 50% as education stumbles under the burden of Ivory Coast's ongoing civil war and its aftershocks. What follows is a description of a system that once was - hopefully it will not be too many years before classrooms are rebuilt, and student and educators return there.

Why does Ivory Coast have a poor education system?

Ivory Coast's education problem is mirrored by one horrifying statistic: nearly one in two children did not attend primary school in 2007. This ratio varied little throughout individual communities, and a large part of the blame went to lack of infrastructure.

How can middle school students learn about the Solar System?

The solar system is an interesting topic for middle school students. It is nice to see how it gets kids thinking and imagining the planetary system they are a part of. Using age-appropriate games and activities to help students learn is crucial for enriching their growing minds.

How does a back to school program help Ivory Coast schools?

Through this program, 200 Ivory Coast schools benefitted from improved furniture, health kits and extracurricular activities in 2008. Back to school campaigns support awareness and increase demand for education in rural villages. Alternative education programs serve to accelerate students that failed to enroll at the appropriate age.

How do alternative education programs work in the Ivory Coast?

Alternative education programs serve to accelerate students that failed to enroll at the appropriate age. The Girls' Education Action Plan exists to bring gender equality into Ivory Coast schools. Perhaps the best agent for change regarding education in the Ivory Coast is the country itself.

Why is education a priority in Ivory Coast?

Not blind to the issues at hand, Ivory Coast's four-year national development plan sought to make education a priority. In 2016, Ivory Coast made education mandatory for all children ages six to sixteen. Furthermore, the 2016 Education Sector Plan seeks to ensure that all children and adults have the proper avenues to seek education and training.
